Jayne Appel (Stanford University)

Classroom
Through the end of the 2009-10 academic year, Appel boasted a 3.14 grade point average while working towards a bachelor of science degree in psychology at Stanford University. She is on pace to graduate from Stanford a quarter early in order to pursue a playing career in the WNBA. Off the court, Appel also plans to pursue a career in mental health advocacy and/or psychiatric nursing after she graduates.

Character
As a third-year captain of the Stanford women's basketball team, Appel has been a key leader in the team's runs to the past two Women's Final Fours, including a spot in the 2008 national championship game. Appel has exemplified the role of a leader by taking her younger teammates under her wing and helping them adjust to not only the collegiate game but also to college life and all that comes with it. Appel's solid work ethic has been demonstrated both on and off the court, as on the hardwood she has adjusted her game to become a center that can run the court in transition on top of her rebounding and scoring talents. Another way Appel has worked extra hard to improve her game is in controlling fouls. As a freshman, she fouled out of four games while being limited to just 19 minutes per game due to foul trouble. Since that year, Appel has fouled out of just three games over the last two years while averaging nearly 29 minutes per game in 2007-08 and 26.0 per game in 2008-09. Off the court, Appel applied that same desire to rehab and work her way back to action from two knee surgeries and a shoulder surgery within the past year and a half.

Community
Along with members of the Stanford women's basketball team, Appel has served as a mentor to young girls in the East Side School's Shoot for the Stars program. She has also served as a pen pal to young elementary students at La Entrada School in Menlo Park, CA. Appel also works on encouraging young girls to lead active lives. With BAWSI (Bay Area Women In Sports Initiative) Appel goes to low-income elementary schools to promote personal health and try to increase girls’ involvement in physical activity. As part of this outreach, Appel, teammates, and BAWSI representatives play games that show the young girls how to be active and also provide tickets to Stanford women's basketball games so that they can come and watch and be inspired. She is also involved with Team up for Youth, a program that sets up opportunities for young girls to get involved in athletics. Through Pi Phi, the sorority she belongs to, Appel helps with The Princess Project, where Pi Phis go and help girls who can't afford a dress choose a prom dress that has been donated for the cause. Appel and the Pi Phis guide the girls through the process of choosing a dress, helping them choose a style and size that will make them have an enjoyable night. The project provides the opportunity for these young ladies to have a prom dress and get to enjoy the prom experience. Appel also serves as a CIT (Crisis Intervention Team) training panel member, donating her time speaking as a family representative at the CIT training center in Contra Costa County. The CIT police officers are training for how to deal with those who are in crisis with a mental illness. As a member of the panel, Appel provides insight on having a family member with a mental illness.

Competition
On the court, Appel has already established herself as one of the best players in Stanford women's basketball history as well as one of the top players in the nation. Entering her senior year at Stanford, Appel is the Cardinal's all-time career leader in blocks (215) and is second in field-goal percentage (57.9%), third in rebounds (942) and rebounds per game (8.6), and seventh in points scored (1,635). By the end of her career, she could very well become just the third player in Stanford women's basketball history to reach the 2,000-point/1,000-rebound club, joining Nicole Powell and Val Whiting. On the national level, Appel was named to the State Farm Coaches All-America Team in 2009 and to the All-America second teams of both the Associated Press and espn.com. Jayne was also named one of Glamour's 2009 Top 10 College Women in September for her accomplishments both on and off the court. Appel also captured Pac-10 Player of the Year honors in 2009 and is a two-time All-Pac-10 first team selection. Appel has been instrumental in helping Stanford to three Pac-10 regular season and tournament titles as well as two trips to the Women's Final Four. In Jayne's three years, Stanford has racked up one of the nation's top records with a combined mark of 97-14.
Amy Beggin (University of New Mexico)

Classroom
Beggin has a 3.74 cumulative grade point average while majoring in journalism/mass communications with a concentration in public relations. She is a management minor. Her outstanding efforts in the classroom have led to numerous awards. Beggin has been named a three-time MWC Scholar Athlete for maintaining a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 or better and earned Academic All-Mountain West three times for having a grade point average over 3.0. She is on track to graduate at New Mexico and is one of the top student-athletes on campus.

Character
Beggin is a great basketball player and an even better person. She is a genuine person with great values and a never-quit attitude. Her core values are expressed through her action when working with her peers and shines through in everything she does. Beggin is always there for her teammates, friends, family and someone people can rely on. She is honest, respectful, determined, polite and courteous of others.

Community
Beggin has always been involved in community service and it's something she holds close to her heart. Her ability to give back to Albuquerque and her hometown has truly shown her heart. Beggin has volunteered to help raise money for ALS through Jerry Lewis telethons, taught basketball and volunteered her time with foster children and visited the University of New Mexico Hospital to lift the spirits of children and provide hope. Beggin and her teammates have volunteered at local events including Fetchapolooza, where they walked dogs and helped adopt pets. For several years Beggin has visited elementary schools around the city, talking with kids about the importance of education. Whatever the involvement, Beggin has continued to reach out to others and provide inspiration and hope.

Competition
Beggin is a two-time Mountain West Conference award winner and a 2009-10 MWC Player of the Year candidate. She is one of only 16 players all-time to reach 1,000 points at New Mexico. Beggin averaged 15.4 points per game as a junior and is a preseason All-MWC selection heading into her final campaign. She is a true leader who has guided New Mexico to two NCAA Tournaments and the Elite Eight of the WNIT last year. Beggin finished 13th nationally last year in free throw percentage (86.9) and is fourth all-time at New Mexico in free throw shooting (81.6). She ranks fourth all-time at UNM in 3-pointers with 154. She was named to the All-MWC Defensive team as a junior and one of the top players returning in the MWC.
Joy Cheek (Duke University)

Classroom
Cheek owns a 2.832 overall grade point average at one of the highest level academic institutions in the nation. She notched a 3.10 grade point average in the fall of 2008 and earned ACC Honor Roll accolades in 2009.

Character
A senior on one of the top women's basketball teams in the nation, Cheek is very well-liked by all players and is an excellent leader. She leads both on and off the court. She picks players up when they are down and celebrates with the others when things are going well. The coaching staff can count on Cheek to set the right example and lead the right way. Her character is so outstanding that she was picked over the summer to do an internship at the White House in the Vice President's office in Economic Policy. She was there for 14 weeks and basically got a chance to look from the inside-out at the operations of the White House and the federal government. She is one of the most vocal players on the court for Duke. Cheek was also one of only two Duke student-athletes selected to attend the 2009 NCAA Leadership Conference, but she could not attend after getting the internship with the White House.

Community
Cheek has been very involved in the community since arriving at Duke four years ago. She has worked with a group of girls at the Emily K Center and performed Read with the Blue Devils where they go to local elementary schools and read to children. She has also made visits to the Ronald McDonald House and the Durham Soup Kitchen. She works with needy families during Christmas and has spoken at the girls club and helped with the Durham Children's Hospital. While an intern at the White House this summer, Cheek and the other interns did a book drive for the local community. She has also spoken at and worked many camps at home and around Duke.

Competition
Over her three years at Duke, Cheek has been a very steady performer as she has played in 101 games while starting 40. She has career averages of 7.8 points and 4.6 rebounds, but is coming off averaging a career-best 8.5 points and 4.7 rebounds as a junior. She is expected to be a starter and challenge for All-ACC and All-America honors as a senior for the preseason fourth-ranked Blue Devils. Over her four years, Cheek has led Duke to 84 victories, three NCAA Tournament appearances and two ACC Championship game appearances. Duke was a No. 1 seed in the 2009 NCAA Tournament and has finished no lower than third in the ACC each of her three years.
Alysha Clark (Middle Tennessee State)

Classroom
Clark sets an example for her fellow student-athletes by maintaining a solid 3.7 grade point average since transferring in one of the college's most prestigious majors: mass communications. Overall, including her two years at Belmont University, her GPA is 3.3. When she is not on the court, Clark can be found in study hall, the student-athlete enhancement center or the library conducting school work to further her education. She is always willing to learn new techniques to understand the concepts relating to her major. She also completed an internship in the sports department of the NBC affiliate in Nashville last summer, getting more on-hands experience relating to her degree.

Character
Clark, despite all the awards that have come her direction, remains one of the most down-to-earth and humble student-athletes to walk the Middle Tennessee halls. She is always deflecting the praise off herself and instead redirecting it to her teammates, whom she credits for her success. She often says she could not do it without the assistance of her supporting cast. Her maturity often is shown non-verbally and it allows her younger teammates to learn from her. During practices, she is teaching her teammates the fundamentals to help them become better players.

Community
Clark uses her personality to reach out to people of all ages, from reading to school-aged children on Read to Succeed Day to visiting underprivileged groups throughout the community. She is a constant presence at team functions, from We-Haul where the Blue Raiders help the move-in process on campus to the March of Dimes to Special Olympics. Clark always is at the forefront of these events, leading the group and being the first to extend her hand.

Competition
Clark will complete her two-year career at Middle Tennessee as one of the best players in school history. She was named an All-American by three different organizations after her junior campaign and already has received preseason honors on the Wade Trophy Watch List, the Naismith Trophy Watch List and as the Sun Belt Player of the Year. She led the country in scoring as a junior with 27.5 ppg, including a national-best 50 points at Troy in February. She was selected as the Sun Belt Player of the Year, Sun Belt Newcomer of the Year, First Team All-Sun Belt, Sun Belt Tournament Most Outstanding Player and All-Sun Belt Tournament Team honoree. Clark participated in USA Basketball's World University Games Team Trials in May and set a league record by being named the Sun Belt Player of the Week six times. Her 935 points scored rank fifth in NCAA history for a single season, while also being the subject of an ESPN.com feature story and listed among the six Faces in the Crowd in the February 11, 2009, issue of Sports Illustrated.
Tyra Grant (Penn State University)

Classroom
Grant is a recreation, parks and tourism management major and maintains a 2.76 grade point average. She earned a 3.0 in the fall of 2008. She would one day like to be the owner of an indoor waterpark resort.

Character
Grant is a hard worker on and off the court. She spent time in early May trying out for USA Basketball's World University Games team, just missing out on a spot. She can be found in the gym and in the weight room working to make herself (and her teammates) better players, day in and day out.

Community
Grant is very involved in the community. She has volunteered her time working with the following organizations or at the following events:
- United Way Day of Caring - painting houses in the community.
- Spotting for therapeutic horseback riding lessons for children through the Easter Seals.
- Participating in the American Cancer Society Walk-a-thon.
- Serving as an official for Special Olympics.
- Working at various basketball clinics for kids.
- Volunteering at Houserville Elementary School.
- Various other community outreach programs (i.e. Operation Salute and WBCA Pink Zone).
- Reaches out to children in the community through the Washington's Whoopsters Kids Club program.

Competition
Grant was a 2009 All-Big Ten first team selection and a semifinalist for the 2009 Naismith Player of the Year award. She begins her senior season on the Wooden Watch list and with her sights set on becoming the fourth player in school history with 2,000 points, needing 553 points. In 2008-09, Grant finished second in the Big Ten and 18th in Division I with a 19.6 scoring average. Her scoring mark is sixth on Penn State's storied single-season scoring chart. Grant was selected as last year's team MVP after registering two games with 30 or more points and 15 outings with 20 or more points. She single-handedly lifted Penn State to a comeback win over Wisconsin in January 2009 as she scored to 23 of her game-high 32 points to erase a 17-point second half deficit. Grant, who had 12 of PSU's 13 points in overtime against the Badgers, hit a jumper at the buzzer to send the Lions home with the win. Grant is also a two-time All-Big Ten honorable mention selection in her career and was named to the Big Ten All-Freshman team in 2006-07.
Kelsey Griffin (University of Nebraska)

Classroom
Griffin is a two-time first-team academic All-Big 12 selection as a biological sciences major. An eight-time Big 12 Commissioner’s Honor Roll selection, Griffin will qualify as a CoSIDA Academic All-America nominee in 2009-10. She owns nearly a 3.5 GPA and is on track to graduate in May of 2010.

Character
Griffin is not only a hard-nosed and hard-working competitor, she has also shown her toughness throughout her Nebraska career. She started every game of her freshman campaign despite battling mononucleosis this past winter. She was named to the Big 12's All-Rookie Team and was the Dallas Morning News Big 12 Freshman of the Year in 2006. As a sophomore, she battled a breathing condition similar to asthma that affected her playing time but still earned first-team All-Big 12 honors. As a junior, she played the entire season with a broken rib but again earned first-team All-Big 12 honors and led Nebraska to the second round of the NCAA Tournament. Throughout the season she kept in almost constant contact with her father in Alaska as he battled cancer. She missed the 2008-09 season with a foot injury that required a pair of surgeries, but will return for her fifth year in 2009-10 as one of the best returning players in the Big 12. Nebraska head coach Connie Yori calls Griffin “the toughest player I have ever coached.”

Community
Griffin represented the women's basketball team on the 2006-07 Nebraska Student-Athlete Advisory Committee and was named the Big 12 Good Works Team in 2007. She has been a part of Nebraska's School is Cool Jam, which reaches out to thousands of middle school children in Lincoln each year. She also regularly serves as a volunteer at Belmont Elementary School. The Nebraska women's basketball team has twice earned Nebraska's Life Skills Team Award as the school's most dedicated program to all aspects of life skills programming.

Competition
One of the top all-around players in Nebraska women's basketball history, Griffin is a two-time first-team All-Big 12 selection (2007, 2008). She was also a member of the league's All-Rookie Team in 2006 and was named the Dallas Morning News Big 12 Freshman of the Year that same season. Griffin ranks No. 10 in school history with her 14.5 points per game career scoring average, while ranking 11th in the NU record book with 1,348 career points. She ranks seventh on the Nebraska list with 665 career rebounds, while ranking eighth with 68 career blocked shots. She also ranks No. 5 with 373 career free throws made, including freshman and sophomore single-season school record totals. Griffin owns 20 career double-doubles. She has been named the Big 12 Player of the Week on three occasions and earned All-Tournament honors three times in her Husker career. She led Nebraska to just its second NCAA Tournament win in school history in 2008, scoring 26 points to power the Huskers past Xavier.
Allison Hightower (Louisiana State University)

Classroom
Hightower has been a leader in the classroom since she arrived at LSU. She has maintained a 3.0 grade point average throughout her career. In 2009, she was one of two Lady Tigers who were named to the SEC Winter Academic Honor Roll. In October 2006, Hightower was one of five student-athletes at the school who were recognized by the LSU Cox Communications Academic Center For Student-Athletes for outstanding classroom and community service work. Hightower is majoring in general studies at LSU with concentrations in communication studies, sports studies and African-American studies. She is on schedule to graduate this spring.

Character
Hightower's leadership role stretches beyond the playing floor. She has always held herself to high standards and been a leader for the Lady Tigers in everything they do from the weight room to other activities. She was a team captain in 2008-09 and she was recently voted by the coaching staff as a team captain for the 2009-10 season. Said LSU head coach Van Chancellor, "She's a leader on and off the floor and the face of our team." Said LSU associate head coach Bob Starkey as quoted in the Baton Rouge Advocate, "In all of my 30 years of coaching men and women, she's the hardest working player I have ever been around - male or female." Hightower represents the women's basketball team on the LSU Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

Community
Hightower has been a fan favorite in the Baton Rouge community for some time. In the summer of 2009, she led a free basketball clinic at the Baton Rouge Recreational Department's Sports Academy that taught children fundamentals of the game and then signed autographs. Since the spring of 2009, Hightower and the Lady Tigers have joined former LSU star and 2009 WNBA champion Temeka Johnson and her H.O.P.E. Foundation in speaking to schools around the Baton Rouge area about the importance of getting an education. The group also donated shoes to deserving children at Magnolia Woods Elementary School. This season, LSU and the East Baton Rouge Parish School System announced a collaboration between basketball and education. Hightower will be making several speaking appearances as part of the program. As quoted from a press release in July 2009, Hightower said, "We have so many people and kids who look up to us. When they see us out there doing positive things, hopefully that inspires them to do whatever they want to do in life. It is just a good feeling to give back to the community whether it is serving food or teaching the game of basketball."

Competition
A 2010 National Player of the Year candidate, Hightower is on watch lists for the Wade Trophy and John Wooden Award. She was chosen as a 2009 State Farm Honorable Mention All-American and 2009 first-team All-SEC performer after leading the Lady Tigers in six categories as a junior, including 14.9 points per game. She led all SEC guards in blocked shots and was the only guard in the league to rank in the top 11 in both blocks and steals en route to SEC All-Defensive Team honors. As a sophomore, she was chosen as the SEC Sixth Woman of the Year. In 2009, Hightower became the first player in school history to lead the Lady Tigers in points, assists, steals and blocks in a single season and the first since All-American Marie Ferdinand (1999) to lead LSU in points, assists and steals in a single season. She averaged 23.5 points and 4.0 assists in the NCAA Tournament to nearly lead LSU past eventual national championship game participant Louisville in the second round. Hightower ranked fifth in the SEC in points per game, fifth in field goal percentage and second in minutes played as a junior. She stands at 943 career points, just 57 shy of 1,000. Her 76 blocks for her career is an LSU record for guards.
Ashley Houts (University of Georgia)

Classroom
Houts was named to the SEC Academic Honor Roll following her freshman, sophomore and junior seasons. To be recognized, a student-athlete must have a GPA of 3.0 or higher either cumulative or for either the previous academic year.

Character
The undisputed leader of the Lady Bulldogs since her freshman season, Houts has led Georgia in minutes played since her freshman year and has broken the school record for average minutes per game twice. One of the most polite and most respectful student-athletes on the UGA campus, "She's a coach's dream," said head coach Andy Landers.

Community
Houts helped the Lady Bulldog basketball's efforts to obtain donated bicycles, assemble the bikes and provide them to worthy children for Christmas both in 2007 and 2008. She volunteered at the Athens Boys and Girls Club, visited patients at Athens' St. Mary's Hospital, took part in "play date" with Clarke Central High School students, volunteered to assist the Special Olympics in her hometown of Trenton, Ga., spoke to children at elementary schools both in her hometown and in Athens, and visited families staying at the Ronald McDonald House. She was a "celebrity" guest for the dunking booth at the Barrow Elementary Spring Fling in Athens; she assisted with summer camps with youth programs in her hometown; she organized and orchestrated individual sessions for children in Ellijay, Ga., mentoring and working with them; she assisted former Lady Bulldog Lady Grooms with a basketball camp in the Atlanta area and volunteered to assist neighborhood children Grooms mentors; she spoke to a church youth group and shared testimony in Buford, Ga.; she volunteered and assisted with an open field day event for Athens-area children at the UGA Intramural Fields, and she visited with children of employees of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow while there as a member of the U.S. National Team competing in the U21 World Championships.

Competition
Houts is on the preseason watch lists for the Wooden Award and State Farm/Wade Trophy. She was named first-team pre-season All-SEC by the league's media. She led Georgia in the following stats in 2008-09: scoring, assists, steals, free throw percentage, assist-to-turnover ratio and minutes per game. She averaged 8.3 points for the U.S. National Team that won the 2009 World University Games, her second international gold medal representing her country in the last three summers.
Ashley Sweat (Kansas State University)

Classroom
Sweat is a kinesiology/pre-physician's assistant major carrying a 3.58 GPA at Kansas State. She is a two-time Academic All-Big 12 first team selection (2007-08 and 2008-09) and garnered CoSIDA/ESPN the Magazine Academic All-District VII second team honors in 2008, her first career regional citation. She has also been named to the Big 12 Commissioner's Honor Roll six times.

Character
Sweat, a native of McPherson, Kan., will be one of K-State's team captains this season, as she has grown into a leadership role. Her commitment to all facets of the game of basketball is revealed during practices and individual workouts as she focuses on making herself and her teammates better each day. With a strong, small-town work ethic, Sweat has endeared herself to K-State fans across the state. She is a role model to young girls throughout the state for her play on the court and her hard work in the classroom.

Community
Sweat has been an active member of the Manhattan and K-State communities during her time with the Wildcats. Following the 2008 women's basketball season, she took part in K-State's Relay for Life walk to benefit the American Cancer Society and the Flint Hills Community Clinic benefit basketball game to raise money for the local free clinic. She also volunteers her time for the Special Olympics All-Sports Clinic, a number of basketball camps throughout the state of Kansas and the Read to Achieve program at Manhattan's Theodore Roosevelt Elementary School. She also assists the K-State Student-Athlete Advisory Council with two events every year, 'Cats for Cans' and 'Angel Tree'. The 'Cats for Cans' event involves team members from each K-State athletic team collecting canned food items for the Flint Hills Food Basket before a selected football game. The 'Angel Tree' event occurs during the holiday season when each team selects a local family to assist during the holidays by donating gifts and money to aid in this endeavor. Sweat also grows her hair long with the intent to donate it to Locks of Love, which is a charity organization that collects hair with the intent to create wigs for children that lose their hair from cancer treatments.

Competition
Sweat, a 2009-10 Wooden Award preseason watch list honoree, enters the 2009-10 season ranked 15th in school history for career points with 1,291 and is 28th in K-State history with 441 career rebounds. She was the first junior to surpass the 1,000-point plateau in school history since the 2003-04 season. She is the 25th player in school history to record 1,000 points and 400 rebounds for a career. Sweat garnered her first All-Big 12 first team honor in 2009, as she helped lead the Wildcats to the 11th NCAA Tournament appearance in the program's history. She was also recognized by the Dallas Morning News as an All-Big 12 second team selection. She finished fourth in the Big 12 and led K-State in scoring with a career-high 16.5 points per game and was fifth in the league in scoring during Big 12 contests with 16.9 points per game. In total, Sweat registered 545 points during the 2008-09 season and became the first player to surpass the 500-point barrier in a season since the 2004-05 season. Sweat also ranked among the Big 12 statistical leaders in free throw percentage (.835; 4th), field goal percentage (.476; 7th) and minutes played (33.67; 7th). She also set a career-high for rebounds in a season with 167 and 5.1 per game. Sweat registered a pair of 30-point efforts during her junior campaign, with a career high-tying 31 points on 9-of-12 shooting against Oklahoma State and 30 points on 14-of-19 shooting at Washington State. During a four-game stretch in February, Sweat set the school record for consecutive free throws made at 33 straight. For her career, Sweat has scored in double figures in 72 of the 99 career games she has played, including 30 of 33 during the 2008-09 season. She has made 79 consecutive starts and has made 85 starts in the 99 games she has played in a K-State uniform.
Bianca Thomas (University of Mississippi)

Classroom
Thomas owns a cumulative grade point average of 3.16 in exercise science. She has been named to the SEC Winter Academic Honor Roll in each of the last two seasons. Thomas was also named to the Ole Miss UMAA Honor Roll in each of her three previous seasons at Ole Miss.

Character
Thomas is an example of what type of character a student-athlete should have. She always puts everyone before her and is always concerned about the well-being of others. She was recently selected as team captain as voted on by her teammates.

Community
Thomas is very active in the Oxford community and has participated in several community service projects since arriving at Ole Miss. She is a member of the Ole Miss Student Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC), which participates in several community service projects. Thomas recently took part in the SAAC Canned Good Drive and helped collect canned goods outside of different locations around Oxford. She also participated in the Rebel Reruns Shoe Project that annually provides shoes to underprivileged Kenyans. In addition, Thomas took part in Reading with the Rebels where she read books to elementary students in the Oxford community. In previous years, Thomas traveled to the Mississippi Gulf Coast to help rebuild a community still suffering from Hurricane Katrina. Thomas also visited an Oxford retirement home and played bingo with some of the elderly residents.

Competition
Thomas proved to be one of the top players in the SEC last season, and she finished the year fourth in the conference after scoring 15.8 points per game en route to being selected to the All-SEC first team. She enters her senior season as the SEC’s returning leading scorer. She put together nine games in which she scored at least 20 points, including a career-high 31 points against Arkansas in the SEC Tournament. Thomas also finished the season ranked third in the SEC in free throw percentage (82.5%) and sixth in three-point percentage (35.3%). In fact, Thomas set a new single-season school record with 73 three-pointers made. She also tied the school record for most treys in a game with the seven she hit at Mississippi State. She enters her senior season on pace to become the 23rd member of the Ole Miss 1,000 point club.
